

Coming Soon: Parker IPS West Coast Service Center

New IPS Service Center will operate out of the Rohnert Park, California.

Parker Electromechanical Automation Division is expanding the IPS T-slot aluminum framing business to its Rohnert Park, California facility by July 1, 2013.

The expansion of the IPS product line to the Rohnert Park facility will provide west coast customers with better service by reducing transit and logistics times. The Rohnert Park facility will provide a full-service design, selection, stocking and production location for IPS extrusions, components, and engineered kits and assemblies. This new service center will reduce shipping times in the extended Bay Area from 4 days to 1 day and from 4 days to 2 days for the majority of the western region.

Parker's IPS product line offers a complete selection of modular T-slot aluminum framing and accessories that allows customers to build the workstations, machine guarding, and enclosure solutions from stock components. The IPS Service Centers provide customers the opportunity to work with a Parker engineer to create custom designs that can be rapidly delivered in either a pre-machined, ready-to-assemble kit or as a value-added assembly.

The new IPS West Coast Service Center will operate out of the Rohnert Park, CA, location of the Electromechanical Automation Division. This location serves as the division headquarters and the manufacturing center for the Electronics Business Unit, which provides world-class drives, controls, and linear motor products to the many automation sectors serviced by Parker. The strategic location of this facility, the top-notch workforce, and the lean manufacturing culture make this an ideal location for the IPS West Coast Service Center.

While we are expanding the IPS Service in the west, we will be taking advantage of increased efficiencies in our eastern service centers and consolidating from two locations to a single service center in Wadsworth, OH. The IPS Marlborough, MA, facility will be closed as of May 17, 2013. Please contact Customer Service at 1-800-333-4932 for North America and 330-335-6740 for International if you have any questions.
